

The strange craft circled the Giant's head, staying carefully out of reach should the big man attempt to grasp it. Around and around it went in the roving beam of light, roaring tremendously. Then a kind of small, black ball was pushed over one side by unseen hands . . . and, in the final flash of the spotlight, the plane zoomed back through the small trapdoor which snapped closed behind it.

A moment later, the dark cavern was illuminated by a terrific explosion not two feet from where the Giant stood!

